LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- Recognize common causes of anaphylaxis in various cohorts and discuss typical work up for anaphylaxis,
- Learn and use current guidelines to improve the safety and effectiveness of SCIT and SLIT,
- Discuss the data supporting the idea that IgE is made against respiratory viruses and describe the current state of research into the role of anti-viral IgE,
- Define the basics of precision medicine and how this specifically applies to Allergy-Immunology,
- To understand the new phenotypes and endotypes of drug allergy and to provide tools and biomarkers of drug allergy,
- Describe phenotypes of FPIE and identify crucial issues in diagnosis and management,
- Learn demographics of training programs in the SEAAI region and identify global issues currently facing training programs/needs,
- Discuss the potential role of the intestinal microbiota in the development of food allergy and discuss potential targets for therapeutic development,
- Learn the “T” terminology for translating research from bedside to population health and understand how T0 research affects T1 and vice versa,
- Understand the efficacy and safety of OIT/EPIT/SLIT and to identify future approaches for food immunotherapy,
- Understand the new classification for mast cell disorders and provide tools and algorithms for the diagnosis of mast cell disorders,
- Discuss updates with MACRA and MIPS,
- Discuss USP/FDA and where we currently stand,
- Discuss the role of tobacco smoke on asthma and the role of dust microbiota on asthma,
- Learn signs/symptoms of the yellow zone and understand the literature regarding treatment options,
- Discuss the utility of patch testing in food allergies and analyze the utility of IgG testing for food allergies,
- Define the role of telemedicine in Allergy-Immunology services and review outcome measures reported in the literature in the application of teleallergy,
- Understand the risks for developing physician burnout and identify methods to be well not be burned out.
